Ford calls out Steen as a Democrat

By DUNCAN DENT duncan@onlinemadison.com

Madison state Rep. Jill Ford had some blunt criticism for the Madison County Board of Supervisors, specifically Board President Gerald Steen, at a lunch last week. Ford addressed a crowd at the Grip N Grin political gathering at Mama Hamil's on Wednesday, June 7.

Ford said it was time for people in Madison County to "open our eyes" and said she felt the Democrats had an outsized influence on the business of the county because of Steen.

She said District 1 Supervisor Sheila Jones and District 2 Supervisor Trey Baxter are "solid Republican votes" on the county board.

"The other three supervisors are very disappointing to me," Ford said.

Ford called Ridgeland's Steen of District 3 a "so-called Republican" and said he sided with the other two supervisors who are Democrats on important issues.

In a conversation with the Journal this week, Ford said Steen is the "swing vote" on the board for the Democrats. Voting with the two

Dems and the Trump indictment Americans should not stand to honor what passes for "justice" in the fresh prosecution of former President Donald Trump.

"All rise" calls the court to order, but

The indictment of Mr. Trump by his political enemies in the Democratic Party reveals a level of lawlessness that no explanation can validate. As determined as Washington's governing elites are to shield their power, the people whom they serve are now called to demonstrate matching grit in annunciating the hijacking of justice has gone too far.

President Biden's Department of Justice has ordered the arrest and appearance of Mr. Trump on Tuesday in federal court in Miami.

There can be no mistake that the move is meant to take out Mr. Biden's most potent rival in the 2024 presidential election

Mr. Trump has reportedly been indicted on seven counts involving a violation of the Espionage Act related to his retention of classified documents at his Mara-Lago estate in Florida after he left office. The post-presidency possession of classified material — a common occurrence until now — is Democrats' most recent cudgel for beating back Mr. Trump's attempt to reenter the White House.

The Trump indictment coincided with the very day that FBI Director Christopher Wray surrendered to Republican lawmakers — under threat of contempt of Congress — a whistleblower statement alleging knowledge of a bribery scheme meant to net Mr. Biden $5 million while he was vice president.

No one would regard the timing as coincidental but a naif so utterly clueless as to notice no connection between the end of the night and the sunrise in the morning.

Summing up the juxtaposition of injustice, former acting Attorney General Matthew Whitaker told Fox News on Friday, "This proves there is not equal justice under the law."

The particulars of the double standard are breathtaking. In recent months, it has been discovered that Mr. Biden secreted boxes of political records, including classified material, at the Penn Biden Center in Washington, his home in Wilmington, Delaware, and the office of one of his attorneys in Boston. In addition, nearly 2,000 boxes of Biden documents stored at the University of Delaware have been declared off-limits for inspection.

In contrast to the authority Mr. Trump acquired as president, any failure on Mr. Biden's part to relinquish classified documents he possessed following his tenure as a senator and vice president would have violated the law. Where is a matching Biden indictment? Likely it is lodged where lost socks are never found.

The federal indictment generated by special counsel Jack Smith is simply the latest act in a seven-year campaign to halt Mr. Trump's efforts to disrupt the inner workings of the permanent state. It is of a piece with the FBI's unwarranted Trump-Russia collusion inquiry and Democrats' twin Trump impeachment failures, which nonetheless wounded the Trump presidency; the agency's underhanded Hunter Biden laptop cover-up, which shielded his father's 2020 presidential run from ballot-box blowback; and the Justice Department's cynical exoneration of Hillary Clinton, which held her untouchable for well-documented mishandling of classified information.

The Trump indictment confirms

Democrats have commandeered the legal system. As Sen. Josh Hawley, Missouri Republican, tweeted: "If the president in power can jail his political opponents, which is what Joe Biden is trying to do tonight, we don't have a republic anymore."

His view should be echoed in a nation-wide crescendo.

age crescendo.

Deception-drenched FBI

"Fool me once, shame on you," the adage goes. "Fool me twice, shame on me."

There is plenty of disgrace to go around for schemes meant to deceive — once, twice and further occasions — on the part of the FBI. Americans may feel humiliated for getting repeatedly played. Still, it is the agency itself that is overdue for remorse — for applying wildly disparate standards in investigating Trump collusion and Biden bribery. Until the nation's so-called top law enforcement organization can prove its ethics are true, there is little reason to regard its words and deeds with anything but suspicion.

The FBI's roughshod treatment of Republican Donald Trump before, during and after his presidency has given new meaning to "the seven-year itch." The maddening national affliction, stretching from 2016 to the present, has gotten under the skin of House Judiciary Committee Chairman Jim Jordan, prompting his dogged pursuit of a long-overdue remedy.

Accordingly, Mr. Jordan has challenged Attorney General Merrick Garland in a June 1 letter to unbosom whether toxic influences from the FBI's Crossfire Hurricane investigation of alleged Trump-Russia collusion have seeped into special counsel Jack Smith's ongoing inquiry into Mr. Trump's handling of classified documents at his Mar-a-Lago estate.

Last month, special counsel John Durham released his final report on the Trump-Russia collusion investigation, concluding the operation was a product of the FBI's politicized bureaucracy. The repurposing of any material gathered during that debunked operation — rooted in agency collusion with Democrat Hillary Clinton's presidential campaign — should be off-limits, Mr. Jordan asserts.

"It is clear that Congress must consider legislative reforms to the FBI, and the Committee has been engaged in robust oversight to inform those legislative proposals," the Ohio Republican said. "In the interim, however, due to the FBI's documented political bias, the Justice Department must ensure any ongoing investigations are not poisoned by this same politicization."

Among other things, the chairman asked Mr. Garland to reveal whether FBI employees involved in previous, unwarranted Trump investigations are working on Mr. Smith's inquiry. That they shouldn't be is equally evident.

Even as Mr. Jordan seeks transparency from the FBI's boss at the Justice Department, House Oversight Committee Chairman James Comer has pressed FBI Director Christopher Wray to produce material purportedly embarrassing to President Biden that an FBI whistleblower claims the agency has buried. The document, an FD-1023 form, contains allegations made by an FBI informant in June 2020 that Mr. Biden engaged in a bribery scheme as vice president to manipulate U.S. foreign policy in exchange for $5 million to be paid to his family's businesses.

To be fair, Americans can draw no conclusion about the president's guilt or innocence from an unverified allegation. They cannot help but be appalled, however, at the absence of fairness in the FBI's apparent strategy to keep whistleblower accusations against Mr. Biden hidden from the public on the heels of shattering robust legal restraints to spy on Mr. Trump and fueling a furtive campaign to sabotage his presidency.

Until FBI leadership is purged of its malign political machinations, the agency whose ethics are drenched in deception deserves little but suspicion.

Don't erase the Anglo-Saxons

It's official. The Anglo-Saxons are getting canceled.

The move comes more than 1,000 years too late for the previously ascendant Romano-British who couldn't resist these Germanic peoples who showed up on the shores of England beginning in the fifth century, but surely, they would appreciate the gesture.

As part of an effort to make its instruction more "antiracist," Cambridge University is going to teach students that identities such as Anglo-Saxon are "constructed and contingent." The school's Department of Anglo-Saxon, Norse and Celtic is hoping to "dismantle the basis of myths of nationalism," and also is keenly aware of "recent concerns over use of the term 'Anglo-Saxon' and its perceived connection to ethnic/racial English identity."

To be honest, the Anglo-Saxons have been living on borrowed time for a while now.

In 2019, the International Society of Anglo-Saxonists — worried about their association with, yes, the Anglo-Saxons — changed their name to the International Society for the Study of Early Medieval England.

The change came after Mary Rambaran-Olm, the group's second vice president, resigned and denounced the organization for allegedly encouraging white supremacy. As The Washington Post put it, the group effectively conceded that "'Anglo Saxon' is code for whiteness."

There is no doubt that the term has been used by malicious and ignorant people over the years to make racist arguments and promote a simplified or outright false version of early English history. But that doesn't mean the Anglo-Saxons didn't exist or the term must be banished.

For all that the "woke" scholars warn against anachronisms, they should be careful not to imply that the Anglo-Saxons came to England wearing white hoods.

To simplify, the island's defenses weakened after the Romans exited and tribes of Angles, Saxons and Jutes arrived and established dominance, although they'd subsequently be involved in desperate struggles for survival against Viking invaders.

The term Anglo-Saxon isn't exactly a neologism. The authoritative book by Nicholas J. Higham and Martin J. Ryan, "The Anglo-Saxon World," notes that it was in use by the eighth century, when writers on the continent apparently used it to distinguish between Saxons in England and those back on the continent. King Alfred the Great, one of the important figures in English history, called himself the "king of the Anglo-Saxons."

The opponents of the term argue that it was nonetheless used infrequently by the Anglo-Saxons. Okay, but how often did the Anglo-Saxons refer to themselves as "insular Saxons," a term that is proffered as more accurate and less problematic? (The terms "Saxons" and "Angles," by the way, were used quite a lot at the time.) And if "Anglo-Saxon" is allegedly too white, does "early Medieval English," another allegedly better phrase, evoke a kaleidoscopic multiracialism?

The Anglo-Saxon ascendancy ended in 1066, when the last Anglo-Saxon king, Harold, suffered a devastating defeat at the hands of the Normans, who were notably brutal and, one must say, as white as the Anglo-Saxons — but "Anglo-Norman" hasn't become politically incorrect.

The Anglo-Saxon contribution to English history isn't merely incidental, as Higham and Ryan write.

The name England means fland of the Angles."

The Anglo-Saxons gave us the most foremost language in the world, English, which derives from Old English or Anglo-Saxon.

They unified what came to be England as we know it, while the English monarchy dates to the Anglo-Saxon period.

The same is true of English Christianity, with the conversion of the Anglo-Saxons beginning in the sixth and seventh century.

The Anglo-Saxons set out the shires that were the units of local government until the lines were redrawn in the late 20th century.

What the academics hostile to their own field of study want to do is take a term that is readily recognized, broadly understood, and generates public interest, and replace it with something more obscure for no good reason.

It doesn't require a gauzily romantic view of the Anglo-Saxons to conclude that they deserve better than today's self-loathing Anglo-Saxonists.

Trump impeachment circus goes on

"The President, Vice President and all civil Officers of the United States, shall be removed from Office on Impeachment for, and Conviction of, Treason, Bribery, or other high Crimes and Misdemeanors." — Article II, Section 4, U.S. Constitution

You would think that after six years of fevered obsession with Impeachment, the folks in Washington might know an Impeachable offense when they saw one.

From the day Donald Trump was sworn in as president after the 2016 election, Democratic politicians and the media were singularly focused on reverse-engineering "high Crimes and Misdemeanors" to hang on Mr. Trump so that they could impeach him.

"The campaign to impeach President Trump has begun," The Washington Post declared on Jan. 20, 2017. When the presses first rolled on that issue of the paper, Mr. Trump had not even been sworn in yet.

"The effort to impeach President Donald John Trump is already underway," the Post explained. "At the moment the new commander in chief was sworn in, a campaign to build public support for his impeachment went live at ImpeachDonaldTrumpNow.or g, spearheaded by two liberal advocacy groups aiming to lay the groundwork for his eventual ejection from the White House."

The cause was immediately taken up by sitting members of Congress, and they never relented — even after he left office. So blind was their obsession with impeachment that Mr. Trump not only became the first president impeached twice on hotly partisan grounds but also made history as the first president ever impeached after he left office.

With so many experts on impeachment lying around the Capitol these days, you would think they might be quick to recognize an actual impeachable offense when it came along.

With so many experts on impeachment lying around the Capitol these days, you would think they might be quick to recognize an actual impeachable offense when it came along.

The problem for the Trump Lynch Mob was that no matter how hard they looked, they could never find an actual impeachable offense to hang on Mr. Trump. And the fact they impeached him even after he left office is final proof they never pretended to take the process seriously. It was all a partisan temper tantrum from day one.

Now comes a slew of charges against a live, sitting president that are such dead ringers for impeachable offenses that they actually made it into the Constitution by name.

Accepting millions of dollars in exchange for public action is the very definition of "Bribery." Selling out American policy to a foreign adversary in exchange for money is "Treason." You don't even have to get into the vagaries of "high Crimes and Misdemeanors" when you have "Bribery" and "Treason" staring you in the face.

The FBI has in possession credible testimony that President Biden — as vice president — accepted a $5 million bribe from the head of a Ukrainian gas company in exchange for using U.S. influence to pressure the Ukrainian government to quash an investigation into the company's corrupt practices. The same witness also claims that Mr. Biden's son Hunter was paid another $5 million as part of the same scheme.

Dovetailing precisely with this evidence is actual video footage of Mr. Biden openly bragging how he had used his position as vice president to withhold $1 billion in foreign aid to Ukraine unless the government fired the prosecutor investigating the company that paid his family millions of dollars in bribed.

"Well, son of a bitch," Mr. Biden marvels in the video. "He got fired!"

We also know for a fact that Hunter Biden was paid millions of dollars from the same Ukrainian gas company to sit on its board even though the younger Biden had no experience in the energy field and does not even speak Ukrainian. His only "expertise" was his father's position as vice president.

We also know for a fact that Hunter Biden had an arrangement with his father to pay him a significant cut of the bribes he collected from Ukraine, China, Mexico and even Russia.

No, these are not just "high Crimes" of "Misdemeanors." This is "Treason" and "Bribery."

Yet what are Democratic politicians and the media in Washington singularly focused on today? Mr. Trump's handling of records from his presidency since leaving the White House.

The Impeachment circus goes on. The only remedy for this innocent American citizen is the next election.

The disciples are looking around the temple mound and Jesus has already said some things to them that bother them and so they begin asking Him questions. And He says to them something that shakes them up and so they ask two questions. And so, verses 1-3 give you two questions which are asked by the disciples to the Lord Jesus. And those two questions actually reveal to you some mistaken thinking on the part of the disciples themselves, and we'll talk about that in a minute. The second part comes in verses 4-14, you see the response to the Lord Jesus Christ to these two questions. In that response, Jesus gives some very important pastoral council, not just to his disciples, but to every believer in every nation, in every generation between then and the second coming. And I'd like to look at these two parts in two points with you. First, that Christians must submit all their thinking to Christ. Second, that Christians must prepare for opposition not triumph until the coming of

I. Christians Must Submit all Their Thinking to Christ

First of all, let's look at verses 1-3: The disciple's mistaken understanding is shown in the very questions that they ask. And let me just propose to you that as we look at verses 1-3, one of the things we learn is this: Christians must submit all their thinking to Christ.

You see, Jesus had just said in His final public sermon, that God is going to leave the temple Jerusalem desolate. This astounded those who heard it, including the disciples. Now here they are, and the disciples walking are amongst the temple mound. And so, they asked Jesus two distinct but related questions: They asked "when is this going to happen?" And, "what are going to be the signs?" And in this passage, we see Christ's response, and in that response, Jesus is concerned to correct their faulty understanding, but also to set forth his positive teaching about the end times.

So let me come back with what I said that we learned from this passage among other things. Christians must submit their thinking to Christ. There is nothing more important in living a healthy Christian life, than for us to deliberately submit our thinking to Christ. The disciples were mistaken in their thinking about what was just about to transpire. And so, it was vital that their thinking be corrected. If Jesus had allowed them to go on with misunderstandings without attempting to correct them, they would have been utterly discouraged and totally despairing when the things came about that were going to come about.

And so, when our thinking is out of sync with the Scriptures, we are in no less danger than the disciples. When our thinking is out of sync with the Scriptures, we are vulnerable to discouragement, to despair, to temptation and to sin. And so, it must be among our great priorities to see that our thinking, our believing, is conformed to the teaching of the Lord Jesus Christ and the Scriptures. And there's nowhere more important for that to be the case than our thinking about the 'end times', because there's always someone peddling to you their version of the 'end times'. We must submit our thinking to what Jesus teach-

II. Christians Must Prepare for Opposition Not Triumph until The Coming of Christ

We see, in verses 4-14, Jesus' response. But in this response, He not only tells the disciples something that is important for them in the next few years, and He not only tells them about things that will happen in years to come – hundreds of years to come – He gives them an authoritative pastoral council which is immediately relevant to their daily living in their present time, and is immediately relevant to our daily living of the Christian life in our present time. It is authoritative pastoral council to Christians, all Christians, in every generation, in every nation between the two advents of Christ.

Now, I'd like you to see in these verses this grand theme: that the Christian must prepare for opposition – not triumph – until the coming of Christ. Christ has told us to prepare for opposition until He should come again. Let's look at the passage together. In verse 4-14, Jesus corrects the disciples' mistaken notions and He offers them some sober anecdotes for their false triumphs. They thought, "Okay, if Jerusalem is going to be destroyed, that means the judgment is going to come and if the judgment is going to come, that means that Christ is going to set up His glorious kingdom, and we're going to reign as kings with Him! Victory is come! Tri-umph is come!" The Lord Jesus wants to say to these disciples, "You have no idea what you are about to step into, and if you go into what you are about to step into, thinking that triumph is just around the corner, you're going to be utterly despairing." Jesus warns there will be opposition, persecution, and even wars. But that these things are to be expected.

He also says, 'the gospel is going to be proclaimed, this gospel, My gospel, the gospel of the kingdom'. The gospel that the reign of God has been brought into our hearts and lives through the rule of Christ, it's been established by grace, it's been received by faith, that gospel is going to be preached to the nations. And therefore, we ought to take encouragement – encouragement that there will be victory in the end.

And of course, it also means that we ourselves, if we are going to take encouragement of that, must be a part of that proclamation. The Lord Jesus, of course, before He ascends into heaven, will explicitly say to his disciples, "you are to preach My gospel to every creature." You are to go out into all the world proclaiming this gospel. And so, these four important practical pieces of instruction are embedded in the midst of this passage about the end times. Now, all of our end time thinking ought to be governed by the clear teaching of Scripture. It ought to be governed by Jesus' practical emphasis. We ought to take courage from the assurance of the final promise. We, ourselves, ought to determine to allow our thinking to be guided by Jesus' focus, by Jesus' emphasis, as we prepare for the end of time. We must simultaneously have a full and firm hope in his coming, His bodily, His physical return. May we be prepared to follow his directives in the meantime.

Hundreds gather to pay respects to Madison officer

By DUNCAN DENT AND JOHN LEE

MADISON — Randy Tyler, a retired career law enforcement officer who had signed on parttime with Madison PD seven years ago because he still had a desire to serve his community, was laid to rest here Friday after being shot by a deranged man in a hostage situation last week in Brandon.

Mitch Tyler, Randy's older brother, said he was stunned by the number of people on the side of the road who came out to support their family and pay their respects to his brother.

"It was amazing seeing how many people were on the side of the road on Highway 51," He said. "Amazing."

Though the funeral service was private, the public was encouraged to stand on the side of the road as the funeral procession left Parkway Church and ended at the Natchez Trace Cemetery

Randy Tyler's funeral procession passed down Jackson Street in Ridgeland.

Hundreds of officers from police departments across the state were part of the procesincluding Madison, Gluckstadt, Canton, Brandon, Flowood, Gulfport, Oxford, Byram, McComb, Capitol Police, Reservoir Police, and even officers from as far away as Louisiana and Texas.

Steve Middleton, one of the people standing along Jackson Street, said Tyler's death is hard for a small community.

"This is still a close community," Middleton said. "We know each other and depend on each other. The most important thing we can do is be out here today. I wish all of this was avoided and we feel for the family. Everyone knows someone in this community and it hits hard."

"Randy Tyler trained a lot of people," he said. "He contributed to a safe community where you don't have to worry and your kids can play outside, and you can sleep safely at night. Sometimes we don't see heroes that are within arms reach and losing one is very Roberts said Tyler's funeral procession was unlike anything she has ever seen in her life.

"It was emotional," she said. Hart said it's amazing that officers risk their lives every day and don't ask for anything

In front of the cemetery, Chandler Parker of Canton was there with her sister-in-law and some of their children.

'A whole bunch of our family is law enforcement and we wanted to come out and show our respect," Parker said.

Henry Wilson of Madison said he "wanted to pay his respects." He said he did not know Tyler personally but had the privilege of talking to him on a few occasions.

"He was a good man and I wish his family well," Wilson

Rose Hopper said that she did not know Tyler, either but had tremendous respect for the work law enforcement and other first responders do.

"They put their lives on the line so we can feel safe," Hopper said. "I grieve for the family. Want to show them that we support them and appreciate them.'

She said she was proud to live in a community that respected the work these men and women do.

Reaction poured in from all over with Gov. Tate Reeves saying, "He is a hero and our state will never forget him.'

Mitch Tyler said his brother was "pretty mischievous" growing up in Flora. He said they liked to ride horses and were big fans of Westerns as kids, often playing cowboys and Indians on their family farm.

He said they would show calves with 4-H and often competed against each other.

'Sometimes he would pick the best calf and sometimes I would," Mitch Tyler said.

As they got older, Mitch said he and his brother continued to connect with an interest in cars.

"I remember he had a Pontiac TransAm that could really fly," Mitch Tyler said. He also remembered a Mercury cougar that the brothers worked on together.

Before joining Madison PD, Randy Tyler retired as the Chief of Police in Ridgeland.

Chief Tyler was a graduate of the 228th Session of the F.B.I. National Academy in Quantico, Va., and was an active member of the Mississippi Chapter of the F.B.I. National Academy Associates.

Tyler was hired as the Ridgeland Police Chief in June 2014 and held the position until the summer of 2015. He succeeded Chief Jimmy Houston following his retirement. Tyler had been assistant chief for 12 years under Houston, as well as serving as Interim Chief while Houston ran for Madison County Sheriff in 2011. He had started with RPD in October of

Mitch Tyler says exactly what drew his brother to law enforcement is still a mystery to

"I don't know if he was just watching Starsky and Hutch or what," Micth Tyler said.

He said he remembers one day his brother said he was going to enroll in law enforcement classes at Hinds Community College and that that was it. He noted that he was certain his brother had found a profession he loved.

"He loved what he did and dedicated himself to it," Mitch Tyler said. "We are all going to miss him."

Getting the Message/Rev. Chris Shelton

Fear of the Lord

The second half of Psalm 76 is a lesson on the fear of the Lord. The people of Judah had been trembling with fear at the threat from the Assyrian army, but when the Lord destroyed the Assyrians in a sudden, shocking manner, the object of Judah's fear became the Lord.

Verse 7 reads, "But you, you are to be feared! Who can stand before you once your anger is roused?" The repetition of the pronoun "you" makes it highly emphatic and exclusive. The Lord and the Lord alone is to be highly feared.

The Scriptures teach us that the Lord is a consuming fire. The burning bush was on fire but not consumed because God was in it. If God is not in us, we will be consumed by His wrath. This is foundational in Scriptural truth. The corruption of our nature and God's righteous wrath against it is emphasized in this psalm and everywhere in God's word.

Verse 8 says, "From the heavens you uttered judgment." Once the sentence is passed in the court of the Lord, judgment comes. In the days of Noah, people were eating and drinking, getting married, carrying on their lives with no fear of the Lord, though iniquity abounded. While they were thinking there was peace, sudden destruction came.

There is no more vital time to fear the Lord than when there is little or no fear of the Lord among people. And that is the day we live in. As the shadow follows the body, so does the pattern of the Lord's judgment inevitably unfold among men and countries.

The second half of verse 8 says, "The earth feared and was still." This relates to the nature of final judgment. Paul says every mouth will be stopped. Judgment is sudden and unexpected, but righteous and irreversible. Men may mock God today, but there will be no excuse in God's judg-

A fear of the Lord will prompt us to seek reconciliation with the Lord. There is hope in the Lord's mercy. Psalm 130 says, "If you were to number sin O Lord, who could stand? But with you there is forgiveness that you may be feared." A portion of that fear understands the alternative to being forgiven. The salvation that there is in Christ is greater than we can imagine.

In verse 9 we see, "God arose to establish judgment, to save all the humble of the earth." The humble are those who have known their sin and sought mercy and forgiveness from the Lord. The judgment of the wicked is redemptive in that it delivers God's people from all opposition and threats.

The word for humble appears in other psalms, sometimes translated "the meek." If we translate it meek in every instance, we gain a good understanding of what Jesus meant when He said, "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth."

Here are a few examples. In Psalm 22, "The meek shall eat and be satisfied. Those who seek the Lord shall praise the Lord." Psalm 25, "He leads the meek in what is right and teaches the meek his way." Psalm 34, "My soul makes its boast in the Lord; let the meek hear and be glad." Psalm 37, "The meek shall inherit the land and delight themselves in abundant peace. The wicked shall be cut off and lose his place. Though you look carefully, he will not be there.'

We see that the meek seek after the Lord and love His glory. The fear of the Lord doesn't drive them away from the Lord. Rather, it draws them nearer and gives deep longings and affection for the Lord. Above all, we need this meekness.

James says to us, "If any lacks wisdom, let him ask of God." The allurements of meekness was diminishing, whereas the world was growing in their hearts. A fear of the Lord was needed to give a spiritual tune up and perspective. When was the last time you asked the Lord for wisdom for you soul?

The people of Judah witnessed a great miracle that saved them from a terrible enemy. They were in awe and praise of God. Christians have been given a greater of Christ goes up in your soul, an awe of other things will go down.

New Stage Theatre's First Stages Theatre Camp has many Madison County participants.

Campers are currently preparing for the camp's final performance, "Seussical the Musical Kids," on June 16 at 11 a.m.

River Tillman, one of the Madison campers, said acting through the whole play has been his favorite part of the camp.

"I have the role of a Who," Tillman said. "I have learned how to do a box step and about teamwork."

Summer camp staff member and Madison resident

Claire Justice Porter said she believes in the importance of the camp and that it is a great way for kids to make friends from a variety of places.

"It's an amazing way for kids to find their voices through a creative outlet," Porter said. "First Stages Camp offers young kids confidence that they can carry with them for the rest of their lives."

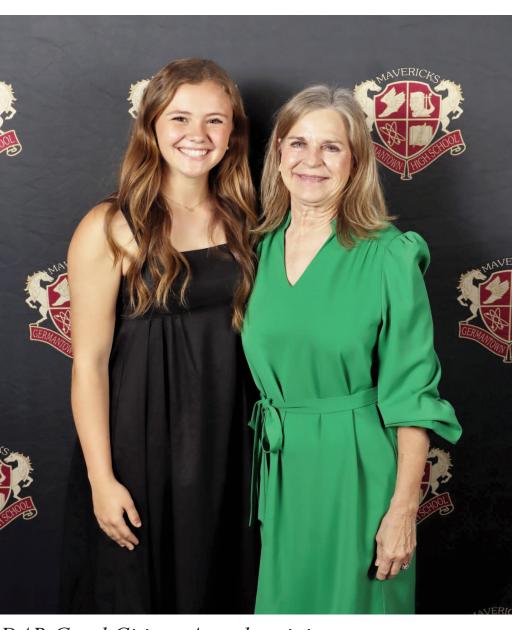

The First Stages Theatre Camp, which began on June 5 and runs through June 16, serves as an introduction to acting, singing, and dancing for students ages 7 to 11. The goal of the camp is to shape and share the creative experience by building a theatre vocabulary, performing in front of others, and developing skills in storytelling and improvisation. Campers have received daily instruction in acting from experienced teachers and will show off skills they have learned with a performance of Seussical the Musical Kids.
